OHIO STREAMS FLOODED BY STORMS

LOWLANDS MENAGED AS HEAVY RAINFALL SWEEPS OVER STATE

Temperature Drop Accompanies Rain Through State

COLUMBUS, O., March 21.—With rivers overrunning their banks and breaking through levees, sewers discharging backwater in Ohio communities generally, Weatherman Alexander of the Columbus office, today expected little relief from the flood conditions now being experienced in both the southern and the northern watershed of the state.

The Scioto River registered twelve feet three inches at 8 a. m. here today, the highest mark since 1921. The Olentangy went over its banks during the night flooding the River Road with a foot of water. Farms on the Scioto Trail south of here were a sea of water, and the river more than a mile wide at many points.

North of Columbus, at Bucyrus and Gallon, the state highway was closed because of floods, necessitating several detours.

Columbus, Delaware and Marion electric interurban cars have stopped crossing the Olentangy bridge at Prospect, south of Marion.

On the Scioto River at Newmans, south of Marion, the interurban tracks were under water, and the Scioto power station was threatened. Marion and surrounding towns were in danger of losing all electric power should the rise continue.

The Sandusky River is over flood stage as far south as Tiffin, and Upper Sandusky.

Coshocton on the Muskingum River is suffering from high water for the second time this year, and Zanesville is menaced by both the Licking and the Muskingum rivers.

At Athens the Hocking River is past flood stage. The Tuscarawas is gradually backing its waters to a dangerous state at Dover, and New Philadelphia, Lowlands of the Ohio River are feeling the encroaching water though the state at no reported points is as yet considered dangerous.

The stage at Cincinnati is 39.7 feet with a flood stage of fifty-five feet. Parkersburg registered 24.5 feet this morning.

The weather man laughed sardonically Monday. Scheduled on the calendar as "the first day of spring" the weather gave evidences of it being anything but.

Chill winds blew and cold rain fell during the entire day. The damp, cold weather was a hangover from Saturday and Sunday when rain continuously fell. Streams in the county were out of their banks but no damage from high water was reported.

On the other hand, this March is said to boast the warmest temperature in a number of years. Crochets are peeping from their pastel heads through the ground, together with other early spring bloom. Trees are beginning to leaf out and every indication points to an early spring—except the weather.

ADMIT SETTLEMENT IN COUNT SALT CASE

NEW YORK, Mar. 21.—The action brought by Count Ludwig Salm against the former Millicent Rogers was officially dropped today by the court's counsel.

Attorney James Donnelly, representing the Count, filed a stipulation to discontinue the action without costs before Justice Aaron J. Levy in special terms court of the supreme court.

The stipulation is scheduled to be signed later in the day by Justice Levy.

Donnelly refused to discuss the case other than to admit that a settlement had been effected out of court. It is understood, however, that Count Salm has accepted a lump sum of $300,000 to renounce all claim to their two year old son, Peter.

HOTEL IS LOOTED

CLEVELAND, O., March 21.—A thief escaped with loot estimated to be worth between $1,500 and $2,000 from a local hotel over the weekend. Jewelry valued at approximately $1,350 was stolen from the rooms of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Wilson, of Youngstown. Other victims included Harry Bryant of New York, $57; John R. Johnson, Columbus, O., $10; and Fred Hainer, Sheboygan, Wis., $5.

KILLED BY TRAIN

NEWARK, O., March 21.—Chas. Abell, 45, was instantly killed here early today when struck by a Pennsylvania freight train. His body was dragged nearly a thousand feet, according to witnesses.

SLAYING OF EDITOR PRESENTS MYSTERY TO BAFFLE POLICE

Art Director Of Magazine Victim Of Unknown Assailant

NEW YORK, Mar. 21.—Mrs. Ruth Snyder confessed today, according to Police Inspector Coughlin, that she and Henry Judd Gray, a salesman, plotted to kill her husband, Albert Snyder, art director of Motor Boating, and that Gray did the actual slaying.

Inspector Coughlin quoted the pretty widow as saying the murder was committed because she had been "madly in love" with the salesman for two and a half years.

NEW YORK, March 21.—With little more to work on than an hysterical recital by Mrs. Ruth Snyder of the events leading to her husband's murder, in which she told of being knocked down, bound and gagged by a tall man with a black moustache, who speaks broken English, police today were attempting to unravel the mystery of the murder of Albert Snyder, art editor of the magazine "Motor Boating."

Mrs. Snyder, questioned for hours by the police, said that she, her husband and their nine-year-old daughter, Lorraine, had returned to their home at two o'clock in the morning from a bridge party at the home of friends. Her husband had gone to sleep at once, she said.

She said that while she was preparing to retire she heard a noise in the hall, and going to investigate, she was seized by a tall man whose face she could not see. She fainted. When she regained consciousness at about 7:30 o'clock she found herself bound hand and foot, and gagged. She managed to arouse her daughter, who discovered Snyder's body on the bed.

Mrs. Snyder said she thought she had heard the voice of a second man, but she had not seen him.

Two detectives left this morning for Syracuse, on receipt of advice that a man had been taken into custody in that city. He was described by Syracuse police as Henry Judd Gray, a salesman, of East Orange, N. J. He was found at the Onondaga Hotel. His possible connection with the murder was not made known.

Police were mystified as to the motive for the murder. It was not certain that anything had been stolen from the house which weakened the robbery theory. Police hinted that there was a possibility that a romance might have been the basis for the crime.

Move To Subpoena Files Of Dearborn Independent Denied—Both Ford And Sapiro Scheduled To Testify

FEDERAL BUILDING, Detroit, March 21.—The first move by Aaron Sapiro, so-called "wheat king," to prove that Henry Ford's attacks on him were inspired by hatred for the Jewish race, were blocked today in the million dollar libel suit.

Attorneys for the auto king objected to placing in evidence the files of the Dearborn Independent. They declared the Ford publication, co-defendant in the libel suit, would be jeopardized if the files were admitted to evidence.

A copy of every issue of the Dearborn Independent was subpoenaed by Sapiro to prove that Ford's attack on him were due to the auto king's hatred for Jews. The issues subpoenaed included copies of all Ford attacks on the Jewish race.

Both Ford and Sapiro will take the witness stand this week, it was said. Sapiro, who spent seven years organizing farmer's co-operative throughout the country, will tell the story of his dramatic rise from a California orphanage to a throne over a large part of American agriculture. Ford will be called as an adverse witness for Sapiro to explain the Dearborn Independent's attacks on Sapiro. The auto king's attorneys probably will prevent his answering many questions by raising constant objections.

CHILLICOTHE, O., March 21.—Elias Fennessey, of Chillicothe, had an embarrassing experience here when two bandits forced him into the automobile near City Park, took all his valuables, and then stripped him of his suit of clothing.

Clad only in his B. V. D.'s, Fennessey made his way through alleys and back streets to police headquarters where Sergeant John Burns summoned a friend of the victim, with an automobile and a spare suit, who took him home. Police have no trace of the bandits as yet.

G. O. P. BLAMED FOR SHORTAGE OF FUNDS

COLUMBUS, O., March 21.—Governor Vic Donahey today reiterated his charge that the Republican majority in the Ohio legislature "accepted the responsibility for the acute financial condition now existing in Ohio's treasury and that it is the task of the legislators to correct the error."

Announcement was made by the governor today that he will transmit to the solons, when they convene here tonight, a copy of the latest communication received by the governor from State Auditor Joseph T. Tracy in which Tracy predicted that there will be a general cash deficit in the state's general revenue fund.

South's appointment as special deputy followed the pointed refusal of Davis S. Barry, senate sergeant-at-arms, to carry out the committee's order to proceed forthwith to Pennsylvania on the ballot box roundup. Barry formally advised the committee he was unable to accept any part of the $1,000 made available by Senator Reed for private funds, and that he was required by law to be certain that all instructions issued him by committee members were sanctioned by law. His action may lead to an attempt to bring about Barry's removal from office in the new congress which convenes next December.

Before returning to Detroit, the fiery Missourian expressed the opinion that the committee still is vested with ample authority to carry out every plan it has undertaken in the Pennsylvania contest.

CONFERENCE IS NOT EXPECTED TO SOLVE DISPUTE OVER WAGE

Soft Coal Supply Is Plenty But High Price Promises

PITTSBURGH, March 21.—Pennsylvania soft coal miners and mine owners are gathering here today to prepare for a bitter struggle.

All mining operations in the unionized soft coal fields of the country will cease April 1. Indications are the tie-up will last at least four months. There are strong reasons for believing it may last much longer.

On April 1, 3,000,000 miners will cease work. In four months, their loss in wages will be $150,000,000. Loss to business will be greater than this.

It is more than a wage dispute. It is a fight on the part of powerful operators to smash or at least cripple the United Mine Workers of America. On the other hand, the union hopes to regain its complete domination of the coal industry, weakened in recent years.

Theoretically, the general business welfare of the country should not suffer until early winter. The stocks of coal above ground are by far the largest in history, and will last through the autumn.

If history repeats itself, however, greedy speculators will start prices skyrocketing within a few weeks and industries, either caught unprepared, or panicky, will pay through the nose.

Neither side has any definite plan to avert the shutdown. On the contrary, each is making preparations for long, enforced idleness.

The present wage contract, negotiated at Jacksonville in 1924, expires at midnight, March 31. In the absence of a new working agreement the union miners must automatically cease work. Neither side believes that between now and April 1 a new contract can be made for the central competitive field.

The central field, composed of Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and western Pennsylvania, is the heart of the bituminous industry. It determines the wages for all other fields and produces more than forty-five per cent of nation's soft coal.

This controversy does not affect the anthracite industry as it is working under a five-year contract made in 1926. Anthracite is a domestic fuel and is not suitable for industrial use. American industry, the railroads, public utilities and manufacturing establishments, depend almost entirely upon bituminous coal. Of all the coal produced in America, ninety-five per cent is bituminous.

There will be 90,000,000 tons of soft coal above ground on April 1. This great reserve, plus the tonnage to be produced in the non-union and outlying fields, will care amply for the public's need for several months.

The union's grip is broken in Pennsylvania, operators in other states will be emboldened to break with the union.

SIX INJURED WHEN TRAINS COLLIDE

TUSCON, Ariz., March 21.—Six persons were suffering from serious injuries here today and many others sustained minor injuries as the result of a collision between the west bound Southern Pacific train—the Argonaut—and a freight train at Cortera, Ariz., fifteen miles west of here.

GOVERNOR SIGNS BILL MAKING ARMISTICE DAY LEGAL HOLIDAY

COLUMBUS, O., Mar. 21.—Governor Vic Donahey today attached his approving signature to the Hamilton bill, designating Armistice Day, November 11, as a legal holiday, and the Emmons bill, modifying the state building code so that vitrified clay drain pipe may be used in place of iron drain pipe in houses.

The governor today announced his intention of permitting to become laws, without his signature, the Hamilton bill, with an emergency clause attached, providing for appropriation of $200,000 from the state treasury for use in combat-

ADMITS EMBEZZLING FROM COMPANY HERE

Summers Hull, 30, Confesses He Lost $6,000 Belonging To The Eavey Co., By Gambling In Dayton Club—Is Indicted

Embezzlement of approximately $6,000 from The Eavey Co., wholesale grocers, this city, was disclosed with the arrest Saturday of Summers Hull, 30, former salesman for the company, by County Road Patrolman Kenneth C. Barr on a secret indictment returned by the grand jury last Tuesday.

Hull was indicted on three counts charging embezzlement of $300. Arraigned before Judge R. L. Gowdy in Common Pleas Court Monday morning, Hull admitted he had lost the money gambling and that the discrepancy in his accounts amounted to nearly $6,000.

He had been employed as a salesman for the company in Dayton for two years but was discharged January 5 when company officials declared they found a serious shortage in his accounts.

Officials declined to discuss the case. It is said that although given an opportunity to make good the money, he showed little disposition to do so.

Hull was bonded for $2,000 by the American Surety Co., New York City, at the time he entered the employ of the Eavey concern and the bonding company is understood to have been the more insistent in prosecuting the case.

Appearing in court with his counsel, Attorney Frank L. Johnson, Hull agreed to plead guilty to one of the three counts returned. Prosecutor J. C. Marshall said he would not insist on pleas to the other two counts.

Judge Gowdy took the case under advisement with the announcement he would probably pass judgment in the matter some time Monday. Meanwhile Hull was returned to the County Jail. He was not admitted to bond.

In a declaration to the court that "he might as well tell the facts in the case," the salesman told of losing the greater part of the money shooting dice at the Algonquin Club, Stillwater Ave., Dayton.

He declared he played as much as two or three times a week, invariably losing, but continuing at the pastime with the determination to recoup his losses.

Hull said that when he made regular collections in his district, he held part of the money out until the following week on the chance he would be able to square the shortage, and although this method met with indifferent success, he managed to keep free from suspicion for some time.

Hull asked the court for a suspended sentence expressing willingness to obtain employment and try to reimburse the Eavey Company and the bonding company if he is paroled.

Hull told the court he has never been in difficulty before and is the principal support of his mother, Mrs. William Hull, with whom he makes his home at 430 W. Market St.

The salesman said he thought everything could be arranged to the satisfaction of his erstwhile employers, who, he declared, appeared favorable to a parole and that he was certain he could arrange to make good the loss of the bonding company.

BALKAN WAR CLOUDS ENDANGER OPENING SESSION AT GENEVA

Italy And Jugo-Slavia Threaten Trouble Council Learns

GENEVA, March 21.—Balkan war clouds overshadowed the opening session of the preparatory disarmament conference, which opens this afternoon.

There was general excitement as reports were received of the threatening trouble between Italy and Jugo-Slavia over alleged warlike preparations by Jugo-Slavia.

There were no indications that the league council would be called in special session to deal with the matter. M. Yvanovitch, Jugo-Slavian minister to Berne, denied that Jugo-Slavia would ask a league council session but declared, "we are perfectly willing to have an international commission of inquiry investigate and they will find that Jugo-Slavia is making no preparations for war on invasion of Albania."

Lord Cecil today submits the British disarmament proposals to the conference and tomorrow M. Boncour will submit French proposals. The two propositions are completely opposed and it becomes the task of the conference to attempt their adjustment. It is admitted that the question is not whether an agreement can be reached on the two propositions but rather whether the disagreement between the two can be limited.

UNION OF COLLEGES EFFECTED AT MEET

Union of Franklin and Muskingum Colleges, has been consummated, T. Dales Kyle, Xenia, member of the Muskingum College Board of Trustees, announced on his return from the board meeting, last week. The merging of the two schools took place three or four years ago but the charter has just been granted Muskingum.

Muskingum College celebrated its ninetieth anniversary last week with an elaborate program. Dr. W. R. McClesney, president of Cedarville College, was one of the speakers. The Rev. L. L. Gray, James-town, also a member of the Muskingum College Board, was also in attendance at the meeting.

AMERICAN MARINES LANDED TO PROTECT LIFE AND PROPERTY

International Colony Under Guard—Strike Cripples City

SHANGHAI, March 21.—Chaos prevails in Shanghai today, following the occupation of the native city by the victorious Cantonese.

The fleeing Shantung troops are impressing citizens into service and are firing indiscriminately as they go.

Cantonese sympathizers without waiting for the creation of a nationalist city administration, have taken matters into their own hands, seized the police stations, and are conducting a guerilla warfare on those whom they regard as their enemies.

The international settlement is still inviolate, with strong guards posted and all international citizens ordered to keep within the settlement.

American marines have been landed and have been put on guard duty. Japanese and Portuguese troops have also been landed to aid the British troops.

British troops have been fired on by retreating Shantungites. Two American soldiers doing patrol duty within the international settlement have been beaten up.

Outside of Shanghai similar chaos prevails. Chang Chow is reported to have fallen to the Cantonese thus cutting the Shanghai-Nanking railroad, and barring the retreat of the northerners in Shanghai.

Although calm is reported everywhere in the international settlement, there is great tension and fears are expressed that either the retreating northerners or the guerilla sympathizers of the

SINCLAIR MOVES TO OBTAIN NEW TRIAL

WASHINGTON, March 21.—Challenging the conviction of Harry F. Sinclair, lessee of Teapot Dome, on twenty points of error, attorneys for the wealthy oil man today filed a petition for new trial before Justice William Hitz in the district supreme court.

Sinclair was convicted last Thursday on four counts charging contempt of the senate after a jury in Justice Hitz' court had been out more than eight hours. The trial grew out of Sinclair's refusal in March, 1924, to answer certain questions of the senate oil investigating committee.

SIX SISTERS WILL SEE CHINESE DUTY

CINCINNATI, O., Mar. 21.—Although hundreds of applications were offered, only six sisters of charity, under the jurisdiction of the Mother House of Mt. St. Joseph, Del., O., have been named for missionary work in war-torn China, it was said here today.

The sisters, who will sail from San Francisco in August, will be in charge of Sister Mary Roberta, it was said. The others are: Sisters Mary Evangelist, Mary Conetta, Mary Alban, Rose Agatha, and Frances De Chantal.

VETERAN OFFICER SHOT; TWO ARE HELD

MIDDLETOWN, O., March 21.—Mim White, 24, negro, is held on a charge of shooting with intent to kill, and Charles Harper, 23, negro, is held for investigation today, following the shooting of Patrolman George L. McClesney, 57, veteran member of the Middletown police department.

McClesney was shot when he was sent to quell a disturbance alleged to have been created by the negroes. Both negroes bore slight wounds when they were arrested several hours after McClesney was wounded. The officer is in a local hospital and probably will recover.

THREE HURT WHEN TRAIN HITS SWITCH

HARRISBURG, Pa., March 21.—Lives of several hundred sleeping passengers on the Iron City Express of the Pennsylvania Railroad were endangered when the locomotive of the train picked a switch as it neared the station here early today and crashed into three coaches on a siding. Three men were slightly injured.

FORTY AND EIGHT HOLDS PARTY FOR O. S. AND S. O. HOME WARDS

Dance party and special features sponsored by the Xenia and Columbus chapters of the Forty and Eight Society, social auxiliary of the American Legion, for entertainment of children of the O. S. and S. O. Home in the school auditorium at the institution Saturday night, met with great success.

The evening's festivities were inaugurated with the showing of a Yale University educational film, entitled, "The Fall of Yorktown," an historical picture of the Revolutionary War.

This picture was passed by the Ohio Censorship committee but two days before and the Home was given the honor of a metropolitan first night. This series of films has been highly endorsed by all of the leading educators of the country.

Following the picture a dance party was given for the children. One of the features of the evening was the dance music dispensed by the Midnight Sun orchestra of Xenia, under the leadership of Clarence Jeffries.

Individual ice cream and cake for each of the children was served throughout the evening by the Xenia Vulture. Fancy hats, streamers and balloons gave the high school auditorium a gala appearance.

The Forty and Eight, formerly known as "The Playground of the American Legion" is now better known as "The Workshop of the American Legion." It is foremost in the work of the Legion and started the child welfare program which was turned over to the American Legion and elaborated to its nation wide work that extends into every county and community as well as looking after the orphans of the World War Veterans wherever American Veterans live.

The Forty and Eight of Ohio has retained its interest in child welfare work by making interest in the O. S. and S. O. Home as its major activity. The result of this work is seen in that the legislative and building program now rapidly taking shape in the legislature was first endorsed by the Forty and Eight.

Many like programs for the Home are planned for the future by the many volunteers in Ohio.

Among the many out of town visitors were: E. A. Sims, chief de gare passe and district chemist passe, A. E. Liles, chief de gare and E. F. Palmer, members of the child welfare committee of the Grande Vulture of Ohio that formulated the child welfare program for the Grand Vulture; Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Bell, C. A. Hullinger, R. S. Becker, Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Billeys, Paul Swaley and R. T. Rodenfelds, all of Columbus; J. B. Dawson, of Dayton; E. F. Vandyke, Coldwater; C. E. Eberts, Pittsburgh, Pa.; and H. Dice, Painesville, C. W. Zellars, chemist grand alternate, Springfield, Ohio.

Following the dance, refreshments were served in the dining room of the Administration building at which time appreciation was expressed by both Columbus and Xenia volunteers and Forty and Eight to Columbus and Col. and Mrs. T. E. Andrews for their kind hospitality.

More than sixty visitors were present. Columbus Vulture was represented by twenty delegates. Xenia by a similar number. Springfield by six. American Legion women's auxiliary by fifteen. While members were also present from the women's auxiliary of the Forty and Eight Society here.

The entertainment committee was composed of Ohmer Tate, chairman, Bert Whittington and William Rickles.

Members of the local society are also planning to attend the district meeting or grand promenade at Lancaster, O., March 28.

MRS. MARTHA DUNLAP CALLED BY DEATH

Mrs. Martha J. Dunlap, 74, wife of Squire C. P. Dunlap, and former resident of Greene County, died at her home near Mount Pleasant in Clinton County at 2 o'clock Monday morning after an illness of three years.

Two and one-half months ago Mrs. Dunlap submitted to a serious operation at McClellan Hospital, this city.

She moved to Greene County from Highland County in 1884 but for the past twenty-nine years had been a resident of Clinton County.

Surviving is her husband, and four children, Mrs. Thomas Middleton, near Xenia; and J. C. Russell and James, all of Wilmington; and one sister, Mrs. John Dunlap of near Xenia.

Funeral services will be held at 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon at the Port William M. P. Church after a meeting first at the home at 1 o'clock. The Rev. Mr. Hudlall will officiate. Burial will be made in the Port William Cemetery.

INFANT SUCCUMBS TO SPINAL TROUBLE

Harry Richard Harner, eighteen months' old son of Mr. and Mrs. William L. Harner, Beaver Creek Road, died Monday morning at 8:45 o'clock. The child had been ill several weeks and death was due to spinal complications and paralysis of the right side, following brain fever.

Besides his parents the child is survived by one brother, Robert William, three years of age.

Funeral arrangements are incomplete.

TO GIVE BENEFIT MOVIE FOR FAMILY

Mrs. L. S. Hyman, E. Market St., with the assistance of J. T. Hilbert, manager of the Bijou Theater, is planning a motion picture benefit for a needy family of the city, at the Bijou, Thursday, March 31.

Proceeds of the benefit will be given to the mother of seven children, whose husband and father recently died, and left the family in desperate circumstances. The film to be shown for the benefit will be "London" with Dorothy Gish. Tickets will be on sale over the city after Wednesday.

BELLBROOK

Mr. and Mrs. Allen Davis visited their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Cass and their children in Dayton, Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Casey have moved from the Jobe farm to the Barnhart farm.

Mr. and Mrs. Haas entertained friends from Dayton on last Sunday.

Alma Maxwell has moved to the old Penewit place near Spring Valley.

The Junior Class play, "A Kentucky Belle," will be presented by the Spring Valley High School at the new school house at that place on the evening of March 25.

Huston and Berryhill, our local chicken raisers, have added three new chicken houses to the two larger ones which were found too small to shelter the increase.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Myers, of Belmont, were Bellbrook visitors, Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Spahr are arranging to move into the bungalow on Charles Kable's place.

Mrs. George H. Thorne visited her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Smith at Spring Valley, Sunday.

Bert Spittler, of Spring Valley, spent a few hours in the village, Thursday.

J. L. Myers was in Columbus for automobiles this week.

William Jobe has almost fully recovered from his recent illness caused from blood poisoning.

W. H. Sidenstricker, made 204 gallons of maple molasses during the season just closed.

THIEF

Charles Kable had a Delco light machine stolen from his premises one night recently.

C. W. Taylor, the well-known popular insurance man was in town Wednesday shaking hands with his many friends over the advent into his home of a big baby boy who arrived early Sunday morning, March 13. Mr. Taylor was in high spirits as he informed his friends of the birth of his sixth son. In addition to the half dozen boys who have an inherent right to place their feet under the family table beneath the parental roof, Mr. Taylor is justly proud of his three girls who help to bless the home.

A shower for the benefit of Joseph Michael and family, who lost practically all their personal property in a fire which destroyed their home in Highland County, was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Runyan, one night of the past week. Over $50.00 in household goods was presented by the many guests present. A chicken dinner was served by Mr. and Mrs. Runyan. A good social time was enjoyed by all present. The musical part of the program was taken care of by the three master musicians, Dr. Shoemaker, Peter Runyan and Joseph Prugh. A number of ministers was present, and a good talk made by one of their number. Those attending were:

Mr. and Mrs. Halley Gibson and daughters, Waynesville; Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Curl and family, of Waynesville; Mrs. Dora Morgan and son, of Mt. Holly; Mr. and Mrs. Lampton Smith, of Spring Valley; Mr. and Mrs. Allen Hunt-ington and family, of Waynesville; Mr. Robert Michael, of Spring Valley; Mr. Newton Crawford, of Mt. ### TRINITY MISSIONARY SOCIETY ENTERTAINED.

Woman's Home Missionary Society, Trinity M. E. Church, was entertained by Mrs. M. C. Smith, at her home on E. Third St., Friday afternoon.

Mrs. E. P. Hamlin, president, conducted the business session, and then turned the meeting over to Mrs. Lewis Ward, leader of the program. Mrs. Willard Bennington conducted the devotions, followed by sacred music.

Mrs. Frank Bickett gave the last chapter from the study book, and Mrs. H. C. Aultman and Mrs. Frank Bishop read interesting stories.

A vocal solo was given by Mrs. Bennington, "There Is a Blessed Home" by Geoffrey O'Hara, accompanied by Miss Marjorie Street.

A refreshment course of ice cream and cake was served by Mrs. Smith and her assistants, Mrs. Ward, Mrs. Anna Barnett, Mrs. Laura Alexander, Mrs. Bennington and Mrs. V. F. Brown.

HIGH SCHOOL CLASS ENTERTAINED SATURDAY.

A St. Patrick's Day party was enjoyed by the Class of 1925, Spring Valley High School, when the Misses Harriet and Dorothy Weller, delightfully entertained at the home of their parents, in Spring Valley, Saturday evening.

The early part of the evening was spent in playing "Progressive Flea." Other games were enjoyed throughout the party, after which a very prettily appointed refreshment course was served.

The guests included: Miss Sarah Harner, Frank Elliott, Irvin Harner, Elvira Hurley, Ernest Smith, James Beam, Oran Turner, and the Misses Harriet and Dorothy Weller.

CONFERENCE REPORTS TO FEATURE D. A. R. MEET

Meeting of Catherine Greene Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, at the home of Miss Sarah Nell Williams, 110 E. Market St., Wednesday afternoon, promises to be interesting, when delegates to the state conference at Columbus, last week, give their reports.

Messrs. William and Robert Wead, sons of County Auditor and Mrs. R. O. Wead and students at the Ohio State University are spending their spring vacations with their parents.

Mr. Roger Collins, Cedarville, underwent a tonsilectomy at the office of a local physician, Monday morning.

Mr. Harold Fawcett, who has been confined to his home with an attack of grip has returned to his work at the Commercial and Savings Bank.

Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Adair arrived home Monday from the south, where they spent several weeks. They spent the past week end with their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Robert N. Adair, Mayville, Ky.

ST. BRIGIDS HIGH GIRLS WEAR UNIFORM DRESS

St. Brigid's High School has fallen in line with other schools over the country, in issuing an edict in regard to the attire of girl students.

Young women attending St. Brigid's have been wearing, for the past several weeks, attractive outfits, all of the same style. The uniforms are all of dark blue, the frock consisting of a separate skirt, with a blouse of the midly type. With this is worn a small "Buster Brown" white collar, and a Roman striped tie.

The uniform was designed and ordered by Sister Laureline, superior of the school. The school order does not affect other details of the girls' dress.

The girls are as modestly but simply attired as those in the above picture, taken in San Diego, Cal. High School, where a similar dress rule is in effect.

INGRATITUDE MOST SERIOUS SIN SAYS EVANGELIST HERE

"To violate the moral law of God is a dreadful thing and carries with it, its penalty. But the greatest sin of the age is not some actual transgression of the law of God, but that of ingratitude and in unappreciativeness of the great provision God has made for our salvation."

These statements were part of the sermon of the Rev. W. G. Bennett, at the Church of the Nazarene Sunday evening. His subject was "The Sin of Ingratitude." "The picture of David mourning over the fate of his beloved son, Absalom," said the evangelist, "is a picture of the broken heart of God, sorrowing over sinners who cast aside His overtures of mercy and the provision of His grace."

Five persons went to the altar and several hands were raised for prayer, during the service. Before the sermon, the Rev. and Mrs. Landgram sang a duet "Across the Great Divide." Services will be held each night this week at 7:30 except Saturday evening. The public is cordially invited.

VICTIM FORMERLY LIVED AT CLIFTON

George H. Armstrong, West Alexandria, 65, who died at Miami Valley Hospital, Dayton, Friday from injuries sustained Friday morning when he was caught in the shafting of his grist mill, located near the village, formerly lived at Clifton and Fairfield, where he owned and operated grist mills for years and was widely known in that vicinity.

He purchased the West Alexandria mill in 1916 and continued to actively operate it until the fatal accident.

He is survived by his second wife formerly, Miss Emma Penimore; one son, Orville, by his first marriage, who, with his wife and son, live at Fairfield, O.; and two brothers, W. H. Armstrong, Anderson, Ind., and J. E. Armstrong, Bellefontaine.

Funeral services were held at the residence Saturday with interment in Fern Cliff Cemetery, Springfield.

EARL CARROLL MUST SERVE SENTENCE

WASHINGTON, March 21.—Earl Carroll, New York theatrical producer today lost his fight in the supreme court to escape a prison sentence resulting from the famous "bath tub" party given on the stage of his theater.

The high court denied Carroll's petition for a writ of review of his conviction on a perjury charge. No statement accompanied the brief announcement of the court.

Carroll faces a sentence of a year and a day in federal prison at Atlanta and fine of $2,000.

SLIDES OF FAMOUS GARDENS TO BE SEEN

Sherwood Snyder, Dayton, will appear before the Xenia Kiwanis Club, at the Elks' Club, Tuesday evening, and will show seventy slides of the most famous gardens of the world. Officers of the Xenia Garden Club will be guests of the Kiwanians.

Dr. W. N. Shank, Dr. A. M. Patterson and Harold Oldham compose the committee in charge.

Xenia Kiwanians are planning to attend the inter-city meeting at Harrison, O., March 24.

RECEIVE MEMBERS

Twelve new members were received into First Presbyterian Church by the Rev. William H. Tilford, pastor, Sunday.

The Rev. Mr. Tilford delivered a special sermon on "The Practical Disciple, Philip," as a part of the interesting service.

LAYMEN TAKE PART IN CHURCH SERVICE

Laymen took part in the special evangelistic service at the Friends Church, Sunday evening, when several short talks were delivered.

Otis Pramer was chairman of the program, and gave a short address, together with Carl Pramer, William Watkins, Columbus; John Watkins, William Parks, L. L. Jordan, C. S. Mock, and the Rev. D. A. Sellers, pastor of First Reformed Church, the Rev. William H. Tilford, pastor of First Presbyterian Church and the Rev. W. E. Bogan, Spring Valley.

Special music was furnished by Mrs. John Watkins, the Misses Reva and Mary Dakin, B. L. Lackey and the Rev. Mr. Sellers.

RESIDENT OF ALPHA DIES THERE MONDAY

Albert Hanes, 89, died at his residence in Alpha at 2:10 o'clock Monday morning from infirmities of age.

Surviving is one brother, Perry, and one sister, Mrs. Mary Nogle. Funeral services will be held Wednesday at 2 o'clock at the residence, with interment in Mt. Zion Cemetery.

EAST END NEWS

Mrs. Susie Jones and Mrs. Jennie White were called to Dayton on account of the illness of their sister, Mrs. Sarah Wilson.

She Got Rid of Those Two Bad Mornings

Menstruation is a perfectly natural process, but the painful part is NEEDLESS. Long study has absolutely conquered menstrual pain. Science now offers women reliable and complete relief—in a simple, utterly harmless tablet called Midol.

This newest achievement of the laboratory has nothing to do with drastic, habit-forming drugs that kill pain by numbing the whole system! Midol acts directly on the organs affected by menstruation, and nowhere else. Yet relief and absolute comfort come in five to seven minutes!

So, why have a twinge of pain—feel "low" or even uncomfortable? Or take anything to depress the heart or upset the system? All drug stores have Midol in a thin aluminum box that tucks in purse or pocket—for 50 cents.

TWENTY-FOUR FACE MAYOR PRUGH AFTER POLICE ACTIVITIES

What is believed to constitute a record for a single day's session of court was recorded Monday morning when a total of twenty-four alleged liquor law offenders were hauled before Mayor John W. Prugh as a result of activities of the Police Department over the week-end.

Of this number nine cases were made against the accused and a total of $350 in fines with added costs was assessed. A majority of the remaining men and women arrested were released for lack of evidence, or because of being innocently involved.

Ervin Hayslett, Kingman, Clinton County, was fined $100 and costs for possessing liquor after pleading guilty. In default of payment he was committed to the County Jail. Hayslett is married and has nine children.

Arrested Saturday on a charge of possessing liquor following a raid by police on her home at 1143 E. Main St., in which two pints and four half pints of corn liquor were found concealed in a flour bin, Mary Baker, colored, pleaded not guilty. Her hearing was set for Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

Robert Mendenhall, Harry Sinz and Victor Sprinkle, all of Springfield, each charged with drunk and disorderly conduct, pleaded guilty. Sprinkle was fined $100 and costs, Mendenhall $50 and costs for the third offense and Sinz $25 and costs.

Pleading guilty to disorderly conduct, Mary Green, colored, was fined $5 and costs. Oscar Devilbilas was fined $50 and costs for drunk and disorderly conduct. Alva Ary $10 and costs for intoxication, and Harry Sanders, colored, $10 and cost for intoxication. Each pleaded guilty.

JACOB H. GENTNER IS CALLED MONDAY

Jacob Harvey Gentner, 74, died at the home of his brother, John Gentner, in Alpha at 4:30 o'clock Monday morning.

He is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Lillie Keller, Bucyrus, O., and Mrs. John Turner, Greenville, O., and three brothers, John, Alpha; Francis, Woodington, O., and Emerson, Forgeville, Ind.

Funeral services will be held at the residence of John Gentner in Alpha at 12:30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon and again at 1:30 p. m. at the Fourth Reformed Church in Dayton. Burial will be made in Mt. Zion Cemetery.

THEFT OF CHICKENS PROBED BY SHERIFF

Theft of twenty-five chickens from Horace Compton and forty chickens from Mrs. McCray, both of New Burlington, late Sunday night, was reported to Sheriff Ohmer Tate. The fowls stolen were of the Rhode Island Red variety.

The same gang of chicken thieves is believed by County Road Patrolman Kenneth C. Barr to have perpetrated both thefts. Barr investigated the reports and auto tire marks on the road indicate the thieves headed in the direction of Wilmington.

Mr. Compton lives in Clinton County and Mrs. McCray in Greene County. They are neighbors but the county line divides the residences.

COMMITTEE NAMED FOR EAGLES' DINNER

As the present membership drive comes to a close with the initiation of the "Worthy President's Class" Sunday, March 27, officers of Xenia Aerie, No. 1689, Fraternal Order of Eagles, are exhorting members to put forth even greater efforts to increase the large number of applications already received.

The local Aerie is planning for a round of social activities with the next three months and it is the desire of members to redecorate a few of the club rooms.

Judge Edward Dixon, Cincinnati, considered one of the finest speakers in the state, will deliver the principal talk at the initiation Sunday. The program committee, composed of Howard Corr, James Lynch, James Smith, John Scamamahorn and Isaac Knobloch, will serve a banquet to guests, following the initiatory exercises.

MADE SIGMA PI

William A. Neeld, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph M. Neeld, 238 N. Galloway St., student at the University of Pennsylvania, was elected to Sigma Pi Fraternity, recently. It has been announced by the university. Neeld, before entering Pennsylvania, attended Central High School where he acted as business manager of the Central High Review, the junior class play and the year book, assistant business manager of the senior class play and secretary of the radio club and the classe of 1926.

TIRED STOMACHS COME TO LIFE

And Digest Heavy Meals Just Like a Boy

Diapiesin is probably the most powerful aid there is when the stomach seems worn out. It enables you to get away with foods that so often cause the utmost misery. Pie, cheese, cream, sausage, seasoned stews and foods that lighten a dyspeptic even to think of, are as modified milk to a cooing infant when followed by Diapiesin.

A host of people are denying themselves half the pleasure of life hunting for patent, prepared foods that don't meet their needs. For after all it is the state of the stomach secretions that counts. Diapiesin adds to the secretions and actually works on the starches, meats, eggs, cream, etc., and that is what a tired, feeble stomach needs.

Get a 60 cent package of Pape's Diapiesin at any drug store. —Adv.

NO LIMIT TO PROGRESS

A few more successful dashes by aviators in non-stop flights from coast to coast, and the time is not far distant when any rich American may have his home in a crag in the Rocky Mountains, flying to and from business in Detroit or Chicago, in about three hours.

Men will then live, literally with the eagles.

Having gone that far, next man will overcome the law of gravitation, intense cold and inter-stellar space, where men freeze to death in a few moments, so low is the temperature; shoot himself through void of outer space; wrest from nature her inmost secrets of star mist, the original material out of which our earth was fashioned.

Crusty Voltaire, fierce religious disputant, who died in 1778 in one of his books seeks knowledge beyond the stars. "An inhabitant of the star Sirius went on a voyage of exploration, through the remote depths of space. In the course of his travels he visited many other worlds, and at length reached Saturn, that majestic orb, which revolved upon the frontier of the solar system, as then known."

Voltaire's Sirian wanderer in quest of knowledge learned many strange and puzzling facts. But all Voltaire tells is fiction. However, change the name Sirian to American, and there is a chance that one day it may all come true.

Americans of the next generation—who knows?—may yet study the majestic processes of nature by voyaging to remote parts of the universe.

BRIGHT DAYS AHEAD

Times are due to be good for almost everybody during the current year, say the Washington forecasters. But there are two exceptions—the farmer and the bituminous miner. The miner may have no income at all after April 1, and the farmer's chances are not so good as everybody wishes they were.

But people who have jobs have better incomes than ever before. An abundance of credit at low rates is made possible of gold pouring into this country from all over the world. An increasing manufacturing efficiency is resulting in lower prices for many products, which increases the sales. The railroads are able to handle greater volume of goods with less difficulty than ever before.

All these points make for orderly prosperity. Now if the farmer will diversify his crops and increase his co-operative activities, and if the miners and operators can arrive at some solution of their problems, the country should be a happy place.

The man who overbuys his income, however, is going to be just as miserable as ever. But the man who buys wisely as well as generously has the best chance in the history of the world.

MR. BORAH'S RAISE

Senator Borah, it seems, has not accepted the raise in pay of senators voted a couple of years ago. He turned back the additional $2,500 into the treasury on the ground that his constituents elected him at $7,500, and he ought not to take $10,000 until after he has been elected again.

Whatever one may think of Mr. Borah along other lines, this is certainly a decent and honest thing to do, though it will hardly be questioned that the senator has earned the extra pay, and the country pays little enough at best to its public servants. Congressman Tucker of Virginia has also refused to accept the raise this term. Possibly there are a few others not known to fame.

The Theatre

Everyone remembers "Casey at the Bat" as DeWolf Hopper's most celebrated recitation. It is the humorous story of America's best known baseball hero and will be told with imagination and artistry in the film by the same name at the Bijou, Monday and Tuesday.

Wallace Berry, than whom there is no funnier, takes the star role. As the small town diamond idol in love with the village modiste, he'll stop any show and as the heaviest hitter in the big league who plays around with the Florida Sixettes he smacks "Old Man Gloom" right over the highest fence. Ford Sterling has an important part in the story, laid twenty-five years ago, with ZaSu Pitts and other well known players in the cast.

"New York's most recent gala motion picture theater opening, the Roxy, with Gloria Swanson's first independent production, 'The Love of Sunya,' as the opening film, focuses attention upon the surprising inroads made by the 'leaping daguerotypes,' as they were facetiously termed ten years ago, upon the dramatic stage. Little more than a decade has elapsed since the Mark Strand doors were thrown open for the showing of the old edition of Rex Beach's 'The Spoilers,' says Fleet Smith, contributor to this column.

"A walk along Broadway last evening disclosed that there are no fewer than sixteen theaters on or contiguous to Broadway, devoted exclusively to the presentation of films. In virtually every case, these theaters are too large in seating capacity for any play. Yet they are packed every night. A

HEART FAILURE

Heart failure is a term which is used so frequently and so loosely, I suspect a great many people do not know exactly what it means.

Of course everybody understands that if the heart fails, that is, fails to contract and squeeze out the blood that is in it, it stops work, and if it stops long enough, the whole machinery of the body is out of commission and the person is dead.

Almost everybody has seen the signs which the lighting companies display at night, which read: "Light, heat, power." And almost everybody realizes that these three ideas go together; light produces heat and heat produces power or energy.

Imagine a modern machine plant with its firepot, its boiler, its pipes and its machinery, which is set in motion and enabled to do work by the pressure of the steam which is conveyed to it through the pipes. There must first be fire to light the fuel and there must be fuel to undergo combustion and produce heat and there must be water in the boiler to be heated and changed into steam, which produces pressure as it passes through the pipes. If the fire goes out, or if there is no fuel, there is no heat, no steam, no energy. The plant is dead, of no use, accomplishes nothing.

Very much like this is the human machinery, the plant which every living human being carries around with him; the heart is the central source of power and the blood vessels carry from the heart and back to the heart the blood which bears life and energy to every portion of the body. It is not necessary to go into details at this time in regard to the structure of the heart, except to say that it is to all intents and purposes a pump with muscles and valves, blood vessels and nerves.

When these are all acting harmoniously the heart contracts rhythmically and regularly from sixty to 100 times a minute, according to the age and development of the individual.

If it beats irregularly, skipping or delaying a beat, if it beats too fast or slow, these are evidences of failure. If its valves do not fit properly, unusual sounds or murmurs will be developed and these again are evidences of heart failure.

If the heart gets too big, grows larger and thicker, or balloons out and becomes thinner, here again we have very serious evidences of heart failure.

Of course it would be best if we could discuss each one of these conditions, giving each its proper attention, but there isn't time nor space for that, so we can only touch upon some of the symptoms of heart failure in general.

In one class of symptoms we have evidence that the circulation is not right and there will be fatigue after slight exertion, pain after exercise, shortness of breath, especially after going up stairs, and rise and fall of the pulse rate and the blood pressure.

In another set of symptoms we have blueness of the skin, especially of the face and lips, and engorgement of the veins of the neck and liver, though the latter may not be seen.

When there is infection which is causing heart failure, we have symptoms such as pallor of the skin, enlargement of the spleen, hemorrhages, clubbing of the fingers, fever, loss of weight and a pulse running from ninety to 120. Old age is one of the causes of heart failure and so are such diseases as rheumatism and syphilis.

A characteristic symptom in some families is a very rapid heart which must always be a matter for consideration, so also must shortness of breath after exercise, or difficulty in breathing or very shallow breathing.

We often see in the papers that a person died of acute indigestion. You can depend upon it that heart failure would be a better term to say a great deal about the use of drugs in heart failure, but space will not permit.

When a person faints or the heart gives out, think at once of stimulants to the heart, like ammonia, nitro-glycerine, whisky, hot coffee.

When the heart failure is chronic we have many useful drugs, especially digitalis, strophanthus, morphine, the bromides, castor oil and some others.

Ask Dr. Currier that medical question that has been puzzling you. Confine your letter to fifty words and send stamped, addressed envelope for reply. He cannot, of course, make individual diagnoses, and he reserves the right to decide as to the propriety of queries.

KELLYGRAMS

by FRED C KELLY

BEWARE OF FOLLOWING THE CROWD

FRED KELLY

One important fact sticks out from all the pathetic stories one continues to hear about poor fellows who lost their savings or even their homes being caught in the recent corner in a railroad stock.

They didn't lose their money merely because of monkeying with the stock market. Of course if they hadn't been in the stock market, they probably wouldn't have lost. But then a few who were dealing in that same stock made fortunes while others were tragically losing.

The significant point is that those who lost were in the majority and it was being of the majority that caused the trouble. Every fellow who lost did so because he followed the crowd.

It doesn't matter whether you follow the crowd in the stock market or in a shoe store; whatever the majority does is likely to be less intelligent than the action of a comparatively few. I doubt if anybody ever numbered among his acquaintances as many smart people as stupid people, and if he is going to accept advice from friends, he is wise to follow what he learns from the few rather than from the many.

Those who sold stock short—that is, sold what they didn't own—got into difficulty because they did what everybody else was doing. They either blindly followed others or else acted on wrong reasoning.

Many thought: "This stock is so much higher than it was a week or two ago that it must be too high. Therefore it is bound to go down. I'll sell it short and buy it at lower prices."

So many thought the same thing that they created a demand for the very stock they were expecting to see go down. When they became alarmed over its continued rise, they wished to buy at once. But a few shrewd folks, more far-sighted than the majority, had been buying stock while others were selling, and they owned the entire available supply. Just as soon as the shorts had mortgaged their homes and bought all they needed, the price of the stock dropped more than half. Imagine how annoying it must be to have to pay $130 one day and then see the same goods offered only a day later for less than $60.

We must all beware of agreeing with the crowd, because most of us are usually wrong. Did you ever notice in a theater how often most people about you laugh at the wrong time?

If you haven't confidence in your opinion, then hunt up somebody known to be highly intelligent and ask him.

NEW YORK, March 21.—Sir James informed his Doting Dad the other evening at dinner that he had been elected president of the graduating class at the grammar school.

"I only took it," he said philosophically, "because I knew you and Mom'd want to be proud of me."

"For the honor of the family, as it were," interposed the old man. "That's it exactly," said the kid. "Personally, I prefer the freedom of the gank. When a fellow's president of the class he's got to watch his step—you know what I mean."

"I understand exactly, Matey," replied Pop, who had been defeated three times for congress.

Policy Kings still flourish in New York's Ebony and Ivory Belt. Frightened out of their offices by the police, they make their headquarters in limousines playing hide and seek with the authorities and doing a thriving business in tickets for a 600 to 1 shot.

One night a couple of detectives came across an expensive car parked in a Harlem side street, a dim light was filtering through drawn shades. A rhythmic clicking sound rose above the murmur of voices. Wrenching open the door the detectives confronted two unbleached Americans seated amid piles of currency, sacks of coins and boxes of policy slips. In front of them was an adding machine and the cramped quarters contained other office accessories.

Later, in court, the pair admitted that their earnings in the policy trade netted them an average of $15,000 a day.

The wife of a former New York policeman, suing for separation, submitted an affidavit in which she "deposes and swears" that her husband, since quitting his job as Pavement Pounder on Speak-easy Lane, has become the proprietor of a Whiskey Wigwag from which, by the sweat of his right wrist, he wrests an income of $40,000 a year.

She at least might have waited until the honest fellow had his business running smoothly before crashing down on him seeking a portion of the pitiful pittance of his Prune Juice Parlor.

There doesn't seem to be any wreck! He took a long, lingering look at her. "Marie," he said, "you're a wreck!"

That was enough for Marie. She wasn't going to stand around and take abuse like that, so she got a job as a waitress and started suit against the beauty doctor on the grounds that he had punctured her pulchritude, ruined her future as a dancer and otherwise made a wild-eyed ruin out of her.

A jury agreed the other day that the nose Marie is sporting this spring is not the regulation dancer's nose, as it is known here in New York, and awarded her $100 damages.

The Importance of Choosing Clothes That Suit

I know this is the time of the year when every woman has the choosing of her spring costume uppermost in her mind, so I deem it timely and apropos to give you a few suggestions of the basic principles of correct dress and also to touch upon the very real effect that proper clothes have on the mental attitude as well as upon the physique and appearance.

And above all, I must be true to my subject in emphasizing how much becoming clothes enhance the beauty of your face and figure.

By way of proving to you that clothes actually strengthen self-confidence, give poise and self-command, awaken the action of the brain, loosen the tongue and effect the very tone and quality of the voice, I am going to tell you of a simple test which has often been recorded.

That is of taking dirty little children off the streets, bathing them well and then dressing them up in pretty crisp clothes and perky bows. The transition of manner, the increased self-confidence, the heightened spirits, the added self-respect, the superior air, all seemed to point to the influence of the exterior upon the interior—or of Clothes upon the Spirits.

So my message to you today is to take into consideration your temperament, your environment and your station in life, then choose the clothes that will best fit your needs. And be sure you select those that will play up your good looks, for beauty is a priceless jewel that must have its proper setting, otherwise its full depth, tone and quality will not be thoroughly appreciated.

FRIENDS WHO DROP IN

I like the friends who just drop in At any time of day. It shows a care-free soul within, A spirit free and gay.

I like to hear their friendly rap Upon the outer door. I like to hear their quick feet tap Across my kitchen floor.

They bring a bit of pleasant news, Or some amusing tale, Or tell me I've no time to lose, To reach the linen sale.

They do not come with dutious air To pay some social sum. Friends who drop in are simple there Because they want to come.

Many Minds

SIGNIFICANT SAYINGS OF THE DAY

"A college man with an active brain would consider it drudgery to do the janitor work for his office building, even if he were the head janitor, and certainly the tasks involved in housewifery—cooking, washing dishes, dusting, sweeping—in a home, are quite like those of janitorial—sweeping, dusting and washing an office building. And doubtless many college bred wives with active brains do regard their household tasks as drudgery."

Vice chairman of Democratic national committee.

"It is impossible to attain the democratic ideal anywhere in the world under present social conditions."—Alexander Kerensky, former premier of Russia.

"We know what we want and for what we are fighting—to set up a modern state in China if the Chinese people are not to suffer the fate of dead nations. If such a state is to be built up it must be built by Chinese hands. China must be mistress in her own household. This means independence."—Eugene Chen, foreign minister of the Chinese Nationalist government.

MAKING MODERN MENUS

The well regulated household is not without its "emergency shelf." Now that the housewife is realizing the value of a reserve supply of food, it is quite possible for her to prepare an entire meal in thirty minutes and to substitute a new and appetizing dessert at the last moment when the one she has planned fails.

Variety is the keynote of the up-to-date emergency shelf. The following list gives an idea of what a well-equipped shelf may contain:

SOUPS—Two cans tomato.

MEATS—Two cans corned beef hash, two cans beefsteak and onions.

FISH—One can salmon, one can tuna fish.

VEGETABLES—One can asparagus tips, one can sweet potatoes.

FRUIT—One large can salad fruits, one large can Hawaiian pineapple, one can jam.

MISCELLANEOUS—One pint jar mincemeat, one small jar mayonnaise, one bottle pickle or olives, one large canned plum pudding and two cans evaporated milk.

WIFE PRESERVERS

A young chicken has smooth skin and pliable pin feathers. Long hairs, coarse scales on the feet and hard breastbone are sure signs of an ancient bird.

Introducing 1927 Big League Clubs

By DON Q. DUFFY

Special Baseball Writer EFS.
WHEN a manager who has won a city's first major league pennant in thirty-eight years is removed from office and is traded to another fellow's back yard, considerable mystery naturally swirls around the prospect of the club that is to take the field the following spring. Which is the case with the St. Louis Cardinals.

Rogers Hornsby performed the miracle of the age for the Cardinals in 1926. He won the National league pennant, then the world series from the Yankees and two months later was shuffled off to the Giants.

The managerial reins have changed from Hornsby and his aggressiveness to Bob O'Farrell, voted the most valuable player in the league for the past season and one who believes in the theory that action speaks louder than words.

Cold words that spill from type-writer keys cannot definitely and officially announce that Cardinals of 1927 will be weaker than the Cardinals of 1926, through the shift in manager. They may, and again they may not.

It is impossible to be crowned with more success on the ball field than winning the pennant. In this respect Rog Hornsby proved he was the equal of all "master minds" in the past.

Will the Cardinals miss their fiery manager, one who spurred them on with stinging words and whose one goal was to "win that ball game?"

Only time will tell. Hornsby's managerial ability naturally is not questioned. Among other important things he spread personal confidence among his players. He made them believe they were the "best club in the league" by preaching it on the bench after day.

That was 1926. And this is 1927. The past is forgotten quickly in baseball and other fields. And the Cardinals of 1927 will be the attraction, not their double triumph of the past season.

Those who admit Hornsby's managerial tricks are not passing definite judgment on Bob O'Farrell as a manager today. They will wait for the box score returns starting with next April 12. However, they are not the least bit bashful in viewing the Cardinals a strong contender for the next pennant and seeing more than an even break in the trade that sent Hornsby to the Giants in exchange for Frankie Frisch and Jimmy Ring.

Whether the worries of serving as the pennant manager, plus the admitted fondness of following losing ponies caused Hornsby's terrific slump as a batter last season is not known. The truth is that in one year Rog changed from a slashing fence-buster to a mediocre hitter.

In the Cardinal's pennant triumph Hornsby was not as prominent as at least a dozen other members of the team. He was a weak hitter in the pinch and his defensive play around second base was considerably off color.

Thus, the opinion is offered that the change from Hornsby to Frisch for the Cardinals will give them an edge in totalling all points of the two rivals. Frisch is not the long-distance hitter Hornsby is, but he is a far more tricky batter. He is ideal for the hit-and-run style, knows all the tricks about bunting art, and can slash 'em on a line through the infield.

In fielding around second base the "Fordham Flash" also ranks with the best at the position.

Matching Hornsby and Frisch, player for player, the Cardinals are not weakened as much as half an inch. Quite the opposite—Frankie may prove a better player than his distinguished rival.

Then the trade adds a pitcher of experience to the staff in Jimmy Ring. Nobody is expecting Jimmy to rush out and blow himself to twenty or twenty-five victories, but he is being measured for something around fifteen winning games by the conservative followers of the world champions. Which is more than fair enough. Is there any club that would toss aside a pitcher rated good enough for twelve to fifteen victories?

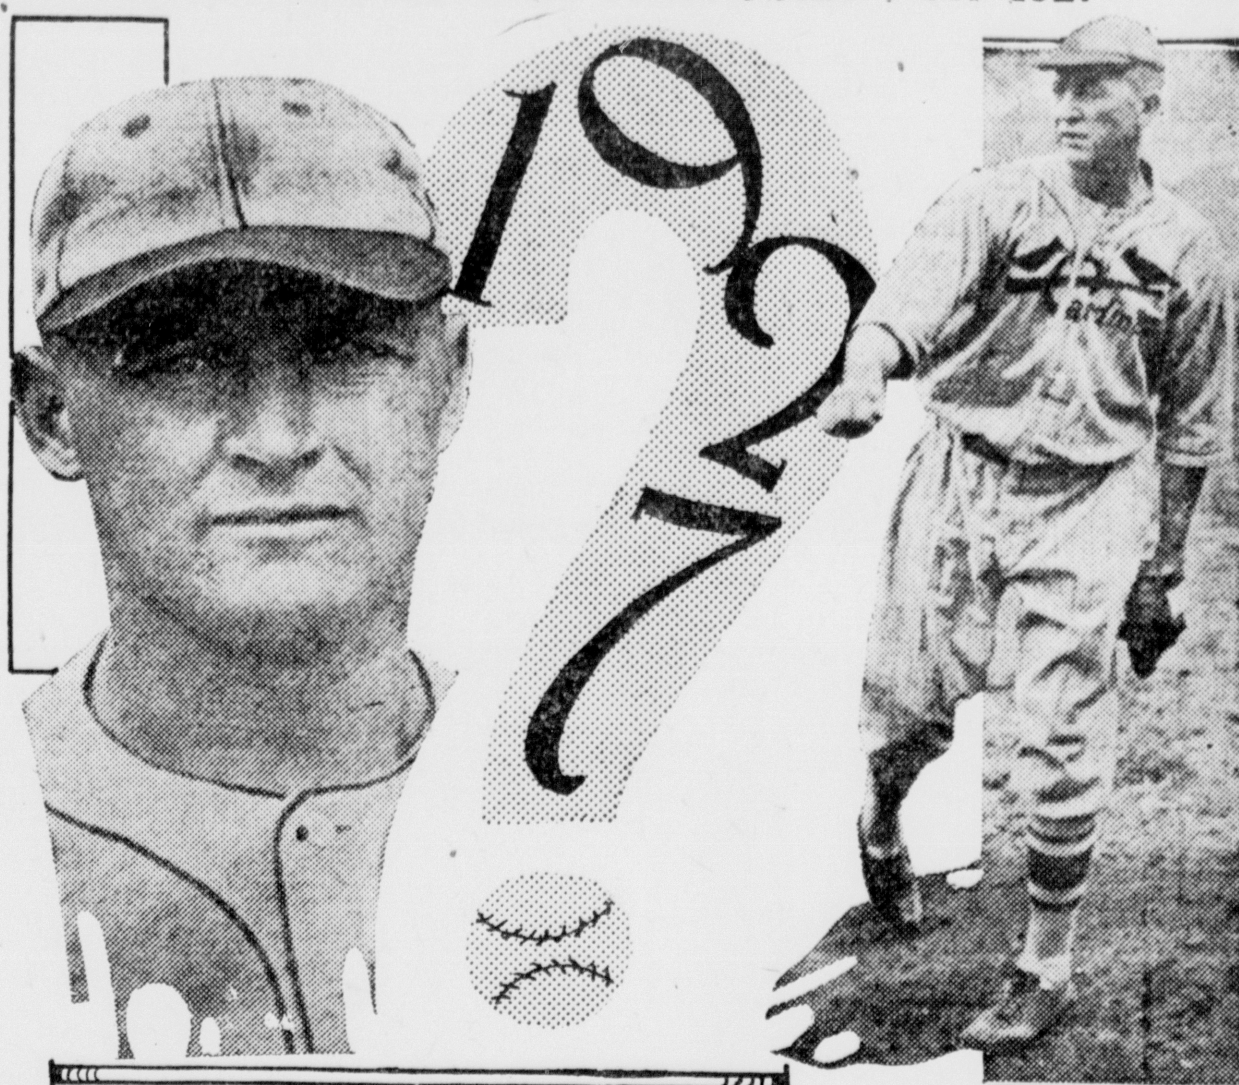

Frisch and Ring form a majority of the new strength for the 1927 Cardinals. World champions seldom are torn from pit to dome and the Cardinals are no exception to the case.

Alexander Haines, Herman Bell, Sherdel, Reinhart, Rhem and Keen are the regular members of last year's staff who return, and with Ring added give the Cardinals a pretty good assortment of pitching.

Only one of the recruits brought in is expected to pass the spring test. He is Southern Eddie Dyer, who served two previous terms with the Cardinals. He blossomed so impressively with Syracuse that Bill Hallahan, another southpaw, was turned over to the International leaguers recently. Russell Miller, also of Syracuse; Carlisle Littlejohn, of Houston, and Whitworth Austin, are rookies who are not expected to see the National league flag raised on opening day.

On the infield Tommy Thevenow will be back at short-stop and Lester Bell, at third base, with Flowers and Toporcer again serving as substitutes. Johnny Mar-

SHOULDERING THE CARDINALS FOR 1927

The old champions with a new idea is the synopsis for the Cardinals' 1927 campaign with Bob O'Farrell to carry out the ideas of his lost teammate, Hornsby, backed by the old reliable Grover Alexander.

1927 CARDINALS

HOLD-OVERS

Pitchers—Grover Alexander, Jess Haines, Herman Bell, Bill Sherdel, Art Reinhart, Flint Rhem, Victor Keen.

Catchers—Bob O'Farrell, Ernie Vick, Firman Warwick.

Infielders—Jim Bottomley, first base; Lester Bell, third base; Tommy Thevenow, shortstop; D'Arcy Flowers and George Toporcer, substitutes.

Outfielders—Ray Blades, Charles Haffey, Taylor Douthit, Bill Southworth, Wattie Holm.

NEW PLAYERS

Pitchers—Jimmy Ring, from Giants; Eddie Dyer, from Syracuse; Russell Miller, from Syracuse; Carlisle Littlejohn, from Houston; Whitworth, from Austin.

Catchers—Frank Snyder from Giants.

Infielders—Frankie Frisch, from Giants; John Martin, from Syracuse.

Outfielders—Danny Clark and Walter Roettger, from Syracuse.

tin, a shortstop from Syracuse, will show his stuff at the training camp to O'Farrell and then probably will be shipped back for another season of experience. For who is going to take the shortstop job away from Thevenow?

Only left field presents a problem in the outfield. Ray Blades, the regular for several seasons, suffered a severe injury to his right knee last August and was forced to undergo a serious operation a month ago. Medical experts who were on Blades' case are pleased with the results of the operation, but a weak knee is considered quite a handicap to a left fielder.

Then Charles "Chick" Hafel, understudy to Blades, suffered a sinus affection during the last six weeks of the past season and the day after the close of the world series went into darkness for treatment to his eyes.

Only the test of chasing liners in the sun and racing for low drive will decide whether Blades and Hafel have recovered.

Wattie Holm is a capable substitute for left field, but only that. He fits in nicely for ten days or two weeks, but the steady strain of playing regularly removes him from the field of big leaguers.

Danny Clark and Walter Roettger, outfield purchases from Syracuse, will be given a chance to show something in left field. Taylor Douthit will remain in center field, with Bill Southworth back in right field.

The Cardinals of 1927 present this analysis—just as strong in actual playing strength as the world champions, with the managerial change alone open to debate.

his life in Greene County, residing in the Grape Grove and Gladstone neighborhoods and in Cedarville. He went to Columbus a year ago to make his home with his son. He was employed as a carpenter after he retired from farming.

His wife preceded him in death eight years at Cedarville. He leaves one son, J. V. Tarr, Columbus and one granddaughter, Miss Dorothy Tarr, teacher in the Columbus schools.

J. Harry Nagley, Xenia funeral director, went to Columbus to accompany the body to the Nagley Funeral Home. Funeral services will be held Tuesday at 2 o'clock at the Grape Grove Church, of which the deceased was a member forty years. Services will be in charge of the Rev. J. F. Gordon, Jamestown, with interment in Grape Grove Cemetery.

BOWLING

Avenging an early season setback in this city, Xenia bowlers administered a decisive defeat to the Federation Alley team at Dayton by a margin of 127 pins in a return game Sunday afternoon. Pin gathering was good in the match, the visitors collecting 2,799 for three games. The home team also topped plenty of wood for a 2,672 total. Lee Regan was high for the Xenia pinsters with 621 followed by Gannon with 587. A third and deciding game of the series will be played in Xenia next Friday night.

Just AMONG US GIRLS by Kathryn Kenney

"KNOW YOUR MAN"

Many a girl "knows" her man before she is ever introduced to him! And there are others who can be married fifty years and not know whether a husband takes one or two lumps.

Some girls try to draw in every man on the same line and wonder why they don't rise either to the bait or the occasion!

It's always well to remember that one man's sweetie is another's wife. What will make one bring home the bacon will make another one bring home a grouch.

one party and takes it back at the next. He arouses interest and sometimes he collects it! The only way to cure him is to demand that he get a divorce and he tells you that he would but his wife wouldn't pay the bill!

There is the good business man, the type that you can't get a thing out of without putting a nickel in first! Tell him you paid $5 for your Paris gown and if he thinks you were stung you have his number and can call him!

Don't try the same thing on all the men because one may like peace and quiet while the others can stand the racket. Keep them all guessing, so that if one man falls there are a lot of others to pick him up!

I have never been able to account for that peculiar quick to human nature that makes the always wish to possess just the opposite of what we already have. Yet again and again we indicate it. When the mode for short hair, became prevalent, this consideration no doubt started many women, for once the long hair was short, it could not be wished back again. It was just a question of anxious months of waiting along.

But now I find that one of the chief arguments waged in favor of short hair is that it can be camouflaged to appear long on any occasion.

HER MAN by BEATRICE BURTON FOREVER MATED © JOHNSON FEATURES INC. 1926

READ THIS FIRST:

SYLVIA STARR has been engaged to RANDALL PHELPS for nearly a year when he suddenly asks her to free him from their engagement. He tells her with brutal frankness that he has fallen in love with her best friend, FAY SHIRLEY.

Sylvia, who had never dreamed of an affair between these two, is stunned. But she gives Ranny up, much to the satisfaction of her AUNT AGONY, the shrewd spinster who brought her up.

She calls Ranny a lazy good-for-nothing, and urges Sylvia to marry PETER WILK, a well-to-do bachelor. But Sylvia cares for no one but Ranny.

As the time for the wedding of Fay and Ranny draws near, Fay tells Sylvia that they have decided they don't really care enough for each other to marry. And Sylvia discovers that she is seeing a great deal of her old beau, EDDIE CARTER.

On a moonlit night, Peter gives a picnic supper in honor of Sylvia's birthday and afterward the crowd plays hide-and-seek in the woods. Like children, Sylvia finds herself paired off with Ranny, who makes love to her and tells her that after all she's the only girl he ever has cared about. And Sylvia, afraid of losing him a second time, suggests they run away that very night and be married. So they do.

Ranny tires of the honeymoon before the first week is over and longs to get back to the gay life he leads in town. Sylvia hides her disappointment and returns to town and spends two weeks furnishing their little flat. The next day, the first night they are to have dinner there, he comes home three hours after meal-time, bringing with him Eddie Carter and Fay. And later in the evening, when he has been drinking, Sylvia sees Fay kiss him while they are dancing together. At midnight he drives Eddie and Fay home and is gone for more than an hour, while Sylvia sits up waiting for him and wondering where he can be all that time.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER XII

Sylvia closed the windows, snapped off the lights and flew into the bedroom to get ready for bed. She didn't want Ranny to know that she had been sitting up, worrying about him, wondering where he was so long. He hated anyone to "make a fuss over him," as he called it. He liked to come and go, as he pleased, with no questions asked. And Sylvia had made up her mind to ask none—that was the way to hold him, she figured, by never letting him feel the weight of the marriage-chains that held him to her.

When he came into the little room with its old-blue silk curtains and fly-tinted walls, she was standing in front of her mirror, brushing her dark hair and lazily humming.

"Hello, darling," she said to him, and smiled at him over her bare shoulder, with her flirt's eyes.

She could tell, by the sharp look he gave her in the mirror, that he hadn't expected this sort of welcome. She had surprised him.

What he had expected, she told herself, was to be cross-questioned about that kiss that Fay had given him as they danced together, or else to be scolded because he hadn't come home to dinner.

There was a baffled, puzzled look in his face as he went about the room hanging up his clothes and putting the buttons in his clean shirt for the morning.

Sylvia took it out of his head and smiled up at him radiantly. "Hi! do that for you, Rann, dear," she said to him, "that's what a wife's for, isn't it, to look after her lord and master's clothes for him?"

He looked solemnly at her with that same baffled gaze. "Search me," he said, "but there's one thing I wish you would do. I wish you'd keep the house stocked up with gingerale and some things from the delicatessen for lunches. You should have had something ready to serve tonight." He frowned.

Sylvia just couldn't let that pass without saying a word to defend herself. "But, darling, I did—I had the nicest little dinner in the world all ready for you at six o'clock," she began, "and I hadn't any idea that you were going to bring anyone home with you."

He broke in with a snort of indignation. "Yeah, that's right! Start to razz me for something that wasn't my fault!" he said bitterly. "I couldn't help hating Fay and Eddie home with me. They just hung themselves on me and what could I do about it?"

"Ranny, I'm not razzing you!" Sylvia shook her head, "and please, let's not quarrel tonight. Think—it's the first night in our very own home."

But Ranny's frown deepened. "Sure you're razzing me," he went on, "you're more because Fay kissed me tonight and you saw it! And let me tell you something right here and now. You won't get very far with me by looking me about things. You're just like all the rest of the married women—you think you can make a man over by giving him bail-Columbia every time he does something you don't like. But you can't! You just make him hate you!"

And with a nod of his fine blond head he disappeared into the bathroom with a Turkish towel over his shoulder. A moment later there came the splashing sound of the shower and above it his voice singing "I've Been Working on the Railroad," very loudly and cheerfully.

Sylvia turned down his bed, climbed into her own and pretended to be asleep when he came back into the room. She felt his eyes on her face for a minute or two, and she hoped with all her heart that he would come and kiss her goodnight. Then she could put her arms around his neck and tell him that she loved him and hadn't meant to "raze" him, and the quarrel would be over.

She waited for his breath on her face and his hands on her shoulders. Then she heard the click of the door and the reading lamp on the table between the two beds as he switched the light off.

She lay awake, listening to the sound of Ranny's measured breathing until she heard a clock, somewhere across the roofs of the town, strike two—then three—then four.

Against the darkness of the bedroom, two figures seemed to dance before her wide-open eyes. The figures of a man and a slim girl, locked together in an embrace—Fay and Ranny.

She tried to shut the sight out of her mind, but it would not be shut out.

Finally, toward five o'clock, Sylvia got up, put on her slippers and bathed and went into the living room.

"If I'm going to spend a 'white night' I may as well spend it reading," she told herself impatiently, and opened Scott Fitzgerald's "Great Gatsby."

She tried to read, but between her eyes and the printed pages, two figures seemed to dance once more—Sylvia and Ranny, their faces pressed close to each other.

On the table behind the davenport was a photograph of him—an enlargement of a snapshot that Sylvia had taken more than a year ago. It showed him in tennis clothes, with a racket under his arm.

She picked it up, looking at it closely. How much better looking he was than other men, she thought. No wonder that girls made fools of themselves over him. They always would probably.

"And I just won't be jealous! I just won't let myself be jealous of him!" Sylvia told herself. "He must care more for me than for any other girl he's ever seen or he wouldn't have married me. That's certain!"

Hugging that comforting thought to her bosom, she tiptoed into the bathroom to bathe and dress for the day.

There was only a few days later that she began to wonder if Ranny really did care so very much for her. It was Saturday night, at half past seven.

They had finished Sylvia's dinner of steak and fried potatoes and tomato salad and were settled down for the evening.

Ranny rustled the pages of the paper as he lay, stretched out in his chair under the lamp. Three feet away, in her little rocker, Sylvia was crying over the last pages of "The Great Gatsby."

She realized, suddenly, that Ranny was yawning and stretching himself. "What's the matter—sleepy?" she asked, looking up at him.

He shook his head and pulled out his watch, looking down at it thoughtfully. "No, I just feel sorta dopey," he answered, with a second yawn. "Do you know, woman, that this is Saturday night? And we're sitting here as if we'd been married a hundred years and were just about ready to drop into our graves."

Sylvia closed her book and laid it on the table. "Well, what do you want to do? Go to a movie?" she asked.

Instead of answering, he looked gloomier than ever.

Sylvia got up and went around to the back of his chair and put her arms around his neck. Then she bent her face down to his and began to cover it with little airy kisses—"but-terfly kisses," he called them in the first days of their engagement, a year ago.

A year ago he would have turned in his chair and pulled her down to him if she had done that. But now Sylvia felt him draw away from her ever so slightly.

"What's the matter?" she asked, knowing that she shouldn't ask him that, even while she was doing it. "Do you mind my kissing you, Ranny?"

He laughed. "Well, I've had an awful lot of it the last two or three weeks," he said, and grinned up at her. "You must admit yourself that a person tires of everything when he gets too much of it—even kissing."

Sylvia caught her breath sharply, as she might have done if someone had reached out and given her a sudden blow.

"You didn't seem to mind when Fay kissed you the other night," she said.

The minute she had said it she knew she had made a mistake. For Ranny got up, laid his pipe on the table beside his chair and stood looking at her.

After a half minute that seemed like a half century, he spoke. "Look here, Sylvia, if I stay here you and I are going to have another row like the one we had the other night. I'm going out for a while."

He turned away, taking off his house-coat as he started. In the doorway he was turned for a paring shot. "We're on each other's nerves—you and I. We've been seeing too much of each other and not enough of other people," he said. "You should have friends for."

He looked as if he were going to say something else. Then, thinking better of it, he turned suddenly and vanished into the bedroom.

Sylvia heard him moving about as he dressed. He was whistling, too, almost under his breath. If he were glad that he was getting away from her and didn't want her to know how glad he was.

Then he came out into the hall and called a number on the telephone. "Hello, Eddie," he said, after a pause. "Is there a game on tonight?"

Sylvia knew then that he was talking to Eddie Carter about the weekly poker game that Eddie and some of his friends had every Saturday. She knew also, that they played for high stakes—rather higher than a young married man could afford.

She walked out into the hall just as Ranny hung up the receiver. "Going to play poker?" she asked, putting her face up to be kissed before he remembered that Ranny was bored with kisses for the present.

He nodded. "Yes. Any objections?" "Not an objection in the world," Sylvia answered, as airily as Fay herself might have answered that or any other question.

As soon as Ranny had let himself out of the flat she telephoned Fay. "I suppose you're alone, too, tonight," she said to her, "at least you're not with Eddie Carter, I know."

"Yes, I'm alone, and as blue as the ocean," Fay answered her. "Let's have a poker widows' meeting and go to a movie."

"Let's go for a walk, instead, if you're not afraid of the dark," Sylvia said. "I want to talk to you. I want to tell you something."

She knew that there was no question she could ask about that mystery—the Eternal Masculine—that Fay couldn't answer. Whatever else she was ignorant of, Fay certainly knew men!

memory of everyone—that atrocious, tightly curled, bad arrangement that was as broad as it was high. After a year or so, this developed into a back shingle and then progressed to the natural head contour as we are now acquainted with it.

Look closely at head No. 2 and you will see what I mean by the perfect natural head contour. The hair has been cut short to conform to those lines of the head. It has been parted about half way back and very low on the right side. It waves in two soft peaks—one over the left temple and another covering all except the lobe of the ear. In the back it has been cut and brushed in a swirl toward the left, just pointing slightly at the nape of the neck. This style is becoming to faces of any shape and coloring providing the back contour of the head is correct.

The head which I have marked No. 4, is more adapted to an individual type—the rather long oval shaped face with prominent well-modelled features—because the sleek effect is as trying to the wrong type of face as it is striking to the right type. Here, again, the hair is parted low on the right side and is cut very short over the entire head with the exception of a single long strand which falls forward over each ear. It may be brought forward in a dip on the forehead but I prefer to see it combed straight back.

Sketch No. 3 illustrates for you how perfectly the short hair can be camouflaged. One may find all manner of twists and rolls, made up which can be ordered to exactly match the natural hair coloring. These come fitted with two small sets of combs which interlock over the short hair and hold absolutely fast. These formations, the most popular of which are the figure eight and a long smooth roll, are always worn very low and usually extend from ear to ear. Hats are much more comfortable and becoming fitted over short hair than the long hair is resorted to most often for evening use. There is a general feeling that a genuine coiffure is a bit more dignified and sophisticated during the evening hours.

The guiding rule for arranging long hair is simply worn in a loose to the head contours as closely as possible. Plain and close—drawn toward the back of the head—the long hair is simply worn in a loose knot at the nape of the neck.

As to waves—the tight regular marcel which was always so artificial looking, has been replaced by a soft loose wave that looks perfectly natural.

Next I am going to tell you about some of the new spring hats that are designed for these coiffures.

AMERICAN MARINES LANDED TO PROTECT LIFE AND PROPERTY

Cantonese may burst forth. The general strike which was called upon the entry of the Cantonese into Shanghai has already seriously hampered normal life, and with 100,000 workers reported idle there may be difficulty in maintaining public services.

The greatest danger at present appears to be from the guerilla warfare of the un-uniformed Cantonese sympathizers who have already clashed many times with the Shanghai police and it is reported that scores of guerillas have been killed and wounded. Sharp fighting occurred before the guerillas took over the Jess Field Park Area police station, one policeman being killed as well as one guerilla.

There are many rumors afloat, one being that the northern troops have gone over to the Cantonese and still another to the effect that the Cantonese are themselves split, with General Chiang Kai Shek prepared to give battle to the communist elements in an attempt to create a virtual Chiang Kai Shek coup d'etat.

Evidence of the chaotic conditions that rule in the native city was given today when it was reported that nationalist guerillas storming Dixwell Road police station, found forty northern soldiers taking refuge there and murdered all of them.

WASHINGTON, March 21.—Fifteen hundred U. S. Marines have been landed in Shanghai, Admiral C. S. Williams, commander of the Asiatic fleet, reported to the navy department this morning.

The municipal council of Shanghai has declared a state of emergency and the marines were landed at the request of the American consul general, for protection of American lives and property, the dispatch added.

PEKING, March 21.—Nanking is not manacred by the Cantonese now and all Americans there are safe, according to a report to the American legation here today. Americans have been embarrassed at Hankow, however, and the legation here has instructed U. S.

Encouragement for Women of Middle-Age

Portsmouth, Ohio.—"When I started going through the critical age of life, I suffered with all the annoying symptoms which come to women at that time. I had dizzy spells and heat flashes, bloating, and my back ached. But after taking a few bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, I experienced no more trouble, came through the critical time in as fine condition of health as any woman could wish for. I can recommend Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription to all women at middle age."—Mrs. Mary Montgomery, 717 Front St. (Picture above.) ## Rheumatism can't be rubbed away

Are you one of those unfortunate who suffer with pains in your muscles and joints, making you miserable, less efficient, interfering with your working hours, ruining your sleep?

You may have tried many things without relief. Why not try S.S.S.? For more than 100 years it has been giving relief in thousands of cases, as testified to in unsolicited letters of gratitude.

"I suffered from rheumatism for a good many years. At times my joints would swell so, I couldn't walk. I tried almost everything. Went to Hot Springs and finally I decided to try S.S.S. I took a course in a short time the rheumatic pains entirely left me. I also had a breaking out on my hands for years that nothing would heal, but now this has disappeared, and I am sure that it was S.S.S. which removed the cause. I am now in perfect health, and want to add that I have tried all kinds of medicines but I think S.S.S. is the best."—Carl C. Campbell, 415 West Main Street, Johnson City, Tenn.

S.S.S. is purely vegetable. It is extracted from the roots of medicinal plants and herbs and gives to Nature what she needs in building you up so that your system throws off the cause.

S.S.S. is sold at all good drug stores in two sizes. The larger size is more economical.
